

Slip Sliding Away - How To Make Clean Cuts

Lubrication is a key element in making nice clean cuts in your glass, so in order to make great cuts each and every time, the Two Lasses want to share our secret for a simple little device you can make at home with an old pill bottle (a small one, will do nicely) and a bit of scrap felt!

Thoroughly clean and dry the plastic pill bottle (a wide mouth bottle is ideal) and then cut a small piece of felt to sit at the bottom. Thoroughly saturate the felt with quality cutting oil. Before each and every cut, be sure to dip your cutter in the bottle, which will deposit a nice coating of oil on the wheel. The best part about this “oil dispenser” is that it is completely spill-proof! Check the felt from time to time and add more oil as needed. Be sure to run your cutting wheel over a clean cotton cloth from time to time to release any glass debris that can get caught in the wheel well.

By keeping the wheel lubricated and free of glass debris, you will ensure that yours will be the kindest cut of all!
